LIFE AND DEATH OF LATE POPE

Eloquent Sermon of Father George Harding.

DELIVERED AT ST. MARY'S

LARGE CONGREGATION HEARS THE SERMON.

The life and death of Pope Leo XIII formed the subject of an address delivered yesterday morning at the Cath olic cathedral by the Rev. Father George Harding of New Orleans, La. He prefaced his remarks by saying that rarely if ever has the world witnessed such an outburst of grief as was brought forth last week at the demise of the aged and universally respected pontiff. Without distinction of class or creed, the world universally scined in a silent prayer for the repos of the pope's soul when it was learned that he had entered upon the endless sleep.

Continuing, the priest said that the pope could have said on his death bed. In very truth, the utterances of St.

Peter:
"I have fought the good fight; I have finished my course; I have kept the faith. As to the rest, there is laid up for me a crown of justice which the Lord, the just judge, will render to me

In that day."

After a further tribute to the pope, the speaker dwelt at length upon the birth and family of his holiness, which has been expatiated upon at length by every paper in the civilized world. Influence of His Mother, Influence of His Mother.

Through the benign influence of his mother, Pecci—the family name of the pope—he first imbibed the glories of the religion of which he eventually became the head. From his father the lead pope received his first lessons in Latin, in which language he wrote lome of the most beautiful poems ever penned. As he grew older his holiness showed a pronounced taste for the sanctuary. This last did not accord with his father's wishes, for the latter wanted to make a general of his son. But the mother said: "Well. you will make a pope of him." And her word eventually came to pass.

After giving a detailed account of the pope's life up to the time he was appointed archbishop in Belgium, Father Harding said:

harding said:
"He endeared himself to all, from the king to the humblest of his subjects. He was a great defender of good, sound Christian education, and good, sound Christian education, and encouraged the pupils of Catholic schools and colleges, often going to visit them, examining the children and presiding at their fetes."

presiding at their fetes."

Commenting upon the part which the pope played in the polities of England, the speaker said that the pope was present in the house of commons during one of the debates in which the immortal Daniel O'Connell was one of ing one of the debates in which the immortal Daniel O'Connell was one of the principal speakers. Then it was that the archbishop asked to be presented to the Irish leader, and ever afterwards he loved to recall this incident in his life. Archbishop Pecci never forgot his hospitable reception in England, and years afterward, when he was pope, he made some return by raising John Henry Newman to the dignity of cardinal.

Fifty-seven years ago yesterday Archbishop Pecci returned to Perugla after an absence of three years and was received with the greatest manifestations of joy by all the people. He remained bishop there for thirty-two years, and the good which he accomplished during his episcopacy is not easily told.

His episcopacy was an arduous one, but his late holiness was equal to the task. He covered himself with glory by his edifying life and his many good and useful works. On Dec. 19, 1853, his was gratefully received by the pop-then reigning, and showered with hon-ors in appreciation of his labors in be-Held Out Olive Branch. After dilating upon the events leading up to the election of Pope Leo XIII on March 3, 1878, Father Harding said:

"He held out the olive branch of reconciliation to the Swiss corporation, the German empire and the czer of Russia." After describing the manner in which those overtures were received, and the great advances which the church made in those countries, the

"No nation has been the source of more anxiety and sorrow to Pope Leo XIII than France." Then the orator went on to explain the difficulties which exist in that country today between the republic and vatican, and touched slightly upon the Irish question, which interests the world today. After telling of the great advances made by the church in always.

"Leo XIII had always a great love for America, and he predicted that she would be the leading power in the

After dwelling at length upon the literary abilities of the pope, Father Harding paid the following tribute to the church in conclusion:

LOCAL BRIEFS.

SOCIALIST MEETING.—The propaganda meeting at Socialist headquarters came off as announced and Owen Prentiss handled the subject of "The Passing of the Democratic Party" to the satisfaction of a numerous audience. The subject was also taken up and enlarged upon by Comrades Fox and South. Miss Charlotte Teller will speak next Sunday. Comrade McLachlan from Ogden was present and made an address.

BURGLARS GET WHISKY.—Burglars broke into the store of the Utah Liquor company on Saturday night, but secured nothing except some good cigars and whisky. Entrance was effected by breaking open a door in the rear of the store. The burglars contented themselves with some good smokes and a jug of Kentucky sunshine. There was no money taken.
